DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

Delegates Will Make Selections To Day-Holt for Chairman.

Saturday's Democratic primaries will meet in their respective congressional districts and elect members of the State committee. The State committee will then meet in this city a week from to-morrow to organize and select a chairman and secretary. There now seems to be no one in the race for chairman except Sterling R. Holt, who will be the right hand man of Thomas Taggart in case he is elected. Charles L. Jewett has been mentioned for the chairmanship but he is now an open candidate for Concress, and so is out of that race. Everyhing seems to point to a cut-and-dried plan to make Holt chairman in the interest of Mr. Taggart's candidacy for the office of State executive. There was only one sentiment expressed at last Saturday's meetings where the matter was acted upon at all in regard to the presidential race. In many counties Governor Matthews was in-

PATRICK GALLIVAN, AFTER SHOOT-ING TWO PERSONS, IS KILLED.

W. B. Murphy, Husband of One of the Victims, the Slayer-Samuel Paugh Hurt.

Yesteday noon Patrick Gallivan, of 168 Deloss street, in a moment of insane frenzy, shot Samue! Paugh and Mrs. Molly Murphy, both living next door to the Gallivan home, and also attacked the latter's husband, Weeden B. Murphy, an inspector for the Consumers' Gas Company. After a terrible struggle Murphy succeeded in disarming the crazed man and shot him through the head, nant counters are so attractive. This is the | killing him instantly. Paugh and Mrs. Murphy are not expected to live. Murphy himself at once telephoned for the police. Superintendent Colbert soon arrived and sent the man to the station house, where he was held for several hours until Coroner Castor rendered a verdict as to the cause of Gallivan's death. The coroner found the shooting had been done in self-defense and Murphy was at once released.

From stories told by the dead man's wife and other witnesses it seems Gallivan must have become suddenly insane after eating his dinner. Mrs. Gallivan was at work in the back yard, when her husband rushed past her and began shooting. Paugh was in an outbouilding. Gallivan caught sight of him and fired two shots, the second taking effect. Paugh fell to the ground in a heap, but managed to drag himself into the building, where he lay bleeding for some time before being discovered. After shooting Paugh, Gallivan jumped over the fence and ran toward Murphy's kitchen door. About the time the first shot was fired Murphy came into his house through the front door. His wife met him and took his coat. They heard the shots and she started through the back part of the house to investigate, her husband suggesting that boys were throwing snowballs against the building. She reached the kitchen door at the same moment that Gallivan arrived. When she opened it he fired at her point blank, the bullet striking her above the abdomen and passing through her body. She fell to the door, screaming to her husband that she was shot and crying for him to run for a doctor. Gallivan entered the house, shout-ing to Murphy that he intended to shoot him. As near as can be learned, it seems the frenzied man fired another shot before Murphy could get a hold on him. Then a terrible struggle began, the madman fighting like a tiger, notwithstanding his age and feeble condition. The kitchen is small and Murphy had little room in which to overpower his assailant. They scuffled into a corner near the stove, where Gallivan forced Murphy against the stovepipe and wall. Murphy managed to seize the revolver and wrested it from Gallivan's grant at and wrested it from Gallivan's grasp, at the same moment shooting. Gallivan fell to the floor with a builet wound in his head, and died without uttering a word. It was the noon hour and many men in the neighborhood were at home for dinner. In a few moments a large crowd assembled and friendly hands helped the half-distracted husband carry his wife into her bedroom, where she received neighborhood attention until conveyed to the City Hospital some three hours later. One of Murphy's neighbors discovered Paugh lying in the outhouse, and he was carried to his room. Later he was also taken to the City Hospital. Murphy then telephoned to police headtal. Murphy then telephoned to police head-quarters. Superintendent Colbert was at home at dinner, but arrived in a short time. Murphy surrendered himself. He was taken to the station house and held on the charge of murder. Coroner Castor was notified and interviewed. Murphy and a number of witinterviewed Murphy and a number of witnesses to the affair. He at once rendered the following verdict: "I, Hiram C. Castor, the coroner of Marion county, having examined the body of Patrick Gailivan and heard the testimony of the witnesses, do hereby find that the said deceased came to his death on the 6th day of January, 1896, at No. 174 Deloss street, Indianapolis, from a pistol-shot wound, and I further find that said injury was inflicted by one William B. Murphy, who was fully justified in the

Murphy was released immediately. The coroner viewed the remains of the dead man and his body was conveyed to Wilson & Murphy's morgue, 470 Virginia avenue, where an autopsy was held at 5 o'clock last evening by Dr. Richard F. Bigger. At the hospital an examination was made of the wounded man and woman. It was found that the bullet hit Paugh below the ninth rib, about the center of the body. It passed through the body, but lodged just beneath the skin, about an inch to the left of the spinal column. Dr. Sutcliffe removed the ball and dressed the man's wounds. He is in a very critical condition, and but little hopes were expressed for his recovery

Mrs. Murphy was shot through the publis the ball in its course penetrating the bladder and rectum, passing out through the fleshy part of the left hip. The hospital physicians thought there was but little chance for her recovery, wounds of the character received by her being considered almost necessarily fatal. At a late hour last night the patients were resting comfortably, but it was feared they would die before

AN OLD QUARREL. About two years ago, it is said, Gallivan and Murphy had trouble on account of improper actions on Gallivan's part, it being charged he grossly offended Mrs. Murphy and her daughter. Since that time the two Edward Gallivan Attaches No Blame families have not been on speaking terms. Gallivan was formerly employed as a switchman at the Big Four shops, near his of the dead man, and who is employed as home, but for the past two years he has been in ill health and has done but little work. For the last six months he has been ill most of the time and has bought a ing. "As near as I can learn," he said, great deal of patent medicine, but has been inable to obtain relief. He has been at Martinsville for treatment without seeming to derive much benefit. It seems to be the general impression in the neighborhood the man has been growing gradually insane. and that he has probably brooded over the trouble he had with the Murphy family. He was regarded as a good neighbor, quiet To-morrow the delegates selected at last | and inoffensive, and the entire neighborhood was terribly shocked and surprised at the occurrence. It seemed to be the general impression last night he must have become suddenly insane. Gallivan's wife and seven children survive im. Three of the boys were away at work. while the other children, with the exception of the youngest, Frank, a boy of four years, were at school. The boys were sent for at once and went to their mother, who had run to Mrs. Schrader's house when the first shot was fired. Surrounded by her children. the poor woman spent a most unhappy day, mounting for her dead husband and bewailing the incidents of the tragedy. When the boys arrived one of them insisted on seeing his father and passed the officers stationed at Murphy's door. He forced his way into the kitchen, where his father was lying in a pool of coagulated black The scene was ghastly and the fumes of blood and burnt powder overpowering. The lad cast one glance at his dead parent, when he swooned and had to be carried from the house. When Mrs. Murphy was carried from the house to the ambulance her daughter, a young woman about eighteen years of age, followed her into the yard, crying bitterly. A girl friend was with her, and placed her arms about the daughter's neck, trying to comfort her. She cried: "My mother may die. I may never see her again. Oh, poor mamma. What am I to do without you?" Friends induced the weeping girl to return to the house. Murphy is at present an employe of the Consumers' Gas Trust Company. He is an aspector, and had just returned from mak-

> handle shops, and has an excellent record Since entering the employ of the gas comhe has earned the respect and good will of fellow-employes. Samuel Paugh, the wounded man, is widower. His wife died last March, since when he has boarded with the Murphys. He is employed by the street-railway company as an electrician at the West Washngton-street power house. A brother James Paugh, lives at Acton. He probably knows nothing of the tragedy, as he had not arrived at the City Hospital late last night. Another brother resides at Lebanon. skull was frightfully fractured by the ball, the top part being shattered and almost entirely torn away. The weapon used by Gallivan was a 44caliber Colt's army revolver, and is probably the same carried by Gallivan through the civil war. He was a veteran and drew a pension. Coroner Castor found another revoiver in his pocket. It was a 25-caliber weapon of the bull-dog pattern. Members of his family said last night they had never seen either revolver and did not know they were in the house. Superintendent Colbert has the weapon used in the shooting in his After Mrs. Murphy's wounds were dressed she was able to talk with much difficulty, but managed to give the following story of

"I don't know why the man did such a thing, unless he was insane. We have had no trouble with him for over a year. He was guilty of showing his person to me and my daughter at one time, but since that trouble we have not spoken. The first I knew of the matter was the shot outside, and when I opened the door he was on the step and shot me. Then he rushed at my husband, and the next I knew was that Gallavin was lying on the floor, with the blood running from a hole in his head."

"The man was certainly insane, for I did

This one hit me and I fell to the walk and knew no more. I know nothing of any other trouble that may have occurred previously. After hearing Murphy's story Superintendent Colbert considered the man was perfectly justified in shooting Gallivan, but felt he could not be released until the coroner rendered a verdict. Coroner Castor talked to him, and after his interview told Superintendent Colbert he need not hold the man so far as he, the coroner, was concerned, as the man had simply acted in self-defense. He was held, however, until the coroner telephoned he had rendered a verdict of self-defense. Last night Coroner Castor said the verdict was rendered without taking written testimony and upon the verbal statements of witnesses. "There was nothing else the man could do. He was simply defending his home and his life. His wife had been shot down before his eyes, and, for all he knew, was at that moment dead. Gallivan was undoubtedly

The hospital physicians assured him everything possible was being done for her comfort and told him there was a slight chance for her recovery. A friend, who accompanied him, urged him to return to his home and children, telling him they needed his care and attention. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have four children, three boys and a girl. The daughter is the oldest and is employed in a store on Virginia avenue. She was not at home at the time her mother was shot, but arrived soon after. The other children are all small, the youngest being about five years old. Murphy returned to his home. The meeting between father and children was touching. The daughter threw her arms about her father's neck and inquired if her mother was alive. Her joy was great on receiving an affirmative answer. During the evening scores of friends and neighbors visited the Murphy household and while all united with Murphy in saying the affair was deplorable, nothing but words of commendation were uttered for his course. Last night Mr. Murphy was seen and recounted the story of the trouble. He said he had just come home to dinner. His wife met him in the side room. At the same moment shots were heard, but he thought some one was throwing snowballs against his house. Said he: "My wife said to me, 'What is that noise Brady?' She started into the kitchen to see what it was. I turned about to follow her. Just then she opened the back door and Gallivan stepped up and shot her. She fell in front of the door, shouting that she was shot and telling me to run for a doctor. Gallivan pushed his way past her and started for me. I saw at once he was crazy. He said he was going to kill me and started towards me. I grabbed his arm and then we had a terrible struggle. I finally managed to get the weapon out of his hand, and shot him. He fell over on the floor beside my wife. When he ran into the house I could see by his wild eyes he was crazy. I didn't have time to think. He had shot my wife and I knew he would shoot me if he got a chance. I had no chance to hit him. He had me against the stove and I could not strike, as my arm was against the wall. After we got my wife into the other room, some one told me Paugh was shot. I went around into the back yard and we carried him into the house. That was the first I knew Paugh had been hurt. He never had any trouble with Gallivan. I don't know whether they had ever spoken. I do not believe they were even acquainted. After we got Paugh in the house, I telephoned for the police. I carried the revolver with me and gave it to a grocer. They took me to the station house, where I stayed some time. All the time I was thinking about my wife and I didn't know but she had died. If she had not been shot I would not have cared so much. I only acted in self-defense. The man had shot Mollie and would have shot me if I had not killed him." THE SON EXONERATES MURPHY.

to Him-The Father Insane. Edward Gallivan, aged twenty-one, a son cashier in the Commercial Club restaurant, called at the Journal office last night and made a statement in regard to the shoot-"there seems to have been no cause for this affair except the insanity of my father. He has had such spells before, but never showed any inclination, more than a rambling talk, to injure any one. About three months ago he had such a spell, and I wanted him to be examined and treated by a physician. I talked to him about it, but the talk seemed only to irritate him, and I said no more, for I did not think of the possibility of him killing or injuring any one His brother also talked to him, but with no better success. He seemed to recover from his spell, and for a long time he did nothing unusual, and we thought he would be afflicted no more. "So far as I can learn the story of the shooting, I cannot attach the slightest blame to Mr. Murphy. It is hard, though, to lose one's father in that way. My mother and father had eaten dinner together, and then mother went to the back yard to finish hanging out her washing. She left father reading a paper. There had been nothing unusual in his actions to attract her attention, and she was very much surprised to hear a pistol shot immediately after he stepped out of the back door. She turned, ran through the house, grabbed her baby and then ran to the home of a neighbor. She met the smaller children at the gate as they were returning from school and took them with her. She did not know, but thought the first shot was merely fired at random, and that then, as father caught sight of Mr. Paugh, he conceived the insane idea of shooting him and did so. Mother did not stop to see what else was done, and knows nothing about the subsequent shooting. "The report of previous trouble between my father and Mr. Murphy, I think, is entirely without foundation. The families were on good terms, and I know of no quarrel between Mr. Murphy and my father, Such a thing might have happened, but the family relations have been pleasant. think my father did not begin this matter through any feeling of anger or revenge but simply because he was insane and did not know what he was doing. It is a very infortunate affair, and one that could hardly be foreseen and avoided. I wish to emphasize the fact that, hard as it may seem to say it about the man who killed my father. I cannot consistently blame him for what he has done. He merely acted in self-defense against an insane man." Mrs. Gallivan says: "I was in the back yard hanging out a shirt I had washed when my husband rushed past me and fired a shot. I grabbed my little boy Frank and ran to Mrs. Schrader's house, where stayed until the trouble was all over. did not see any one shot, and did not know any one was hit until somebody came and said my husband was dead. I have never seen anything in his appearance or conduct that would make me think he was insane He has been sick for several months and unable to work. When my husband shot he was in our own yard. I didn't stop to see what he was shooting at. I was frightened, and was afraid he would shoot the child. It was as much of a surprise to me as any one. My husband never had any where her husband got the revolvers he used. She had never seen them about the Mrs. George Schrader, who lives at 168 Deloss street, said she heard Mrs. Gallivan talking to her children about the affair after they came to her house and over-heard her tell them if she had her husband's case attended to the shooting would never have occurred. "I heard her say she ought to have had him sent to the asylum," said Mrs. Schrader. "She kept saying to them, 'O, if we had only had him taken care of this might never have occurred." Mrs. Schrader said Mr. Gallivan had been ick for a long time, and had been sent to Martinsville for treatment for nervous diseases. He was there until a week or so before Christmas. She had never heard it intimated Mr. Gallivan was insane before.

ency Recognition for Cubans.

The board of governors of the Indianapolis Board of Trade, at their regular monthly meeting last night, declined to indorse the action of the National Board of Trade on the question of a 1-cent postage rate. The Indianapolis board thinks the deficit in the Postoffice Department already too large to admit of a reduction in postage. The board also declined to join in the petition of the Kansas City Board of Trade asking Congress to recognize the belligarancy of Cuba. After discussing the Cuban question the board passed resolutions of sympathy as

"Whereas, the present uprising of the people of Cuba is characterized by a spirit of patriotism akin to that demonstrated by our ancestors in throwing off the yoke of Great Britain, and, "Whereas we believe the great mass of the people of our own government entertain a feeling of profound sympathy and hope for the success of the cause in which they are engaged, therefore, "Be it resolved, By the members of the governing committee of the Indianapolis Board of Trade that we most carnestly sympathize with the people of Cuba in their efforts to achieve their independence and establish a republican form of government Resolved, further, that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to our Senators and Representatives in Congress." The membership committee reported the death of Dr. H. G. Carey and Silas Bowen and the election of Edward D. Evans, Edgar H. Evans and Lyman W. Louis as members of the board. A memorial on the death of Silas T. Bowen, who in 1887 and 1888, was president of the board, was submitted by the committee on resolutions and adopted. There was some surprise when the finance committee recommended that the ordinance increasing the salary of chief clerk of the assessment bureau from $1,200 to $1,500 stricken from the files, for it was known that the passage of the ordinance was desired by Mayor Taggart, who withheld the appointment of William Hughes to the position in order that he might obtain benefit of the increase. Yesterday, it seems, it became known that the ordinance was not to pass for some reason, and Mr. Hughes was appointed at the old salary. The recommendation of the finance commi tee was adopted unanimously.

Councilmen Allen and Payne objected to the passage of the ordinance granting the Big Four Railroad Company the right to lay and maintain a switch across Leota street. They asked that final action be deferred until it was ascertained if the com-Board of Works in lowering the tracks from Ohio street to Seventh. It was recalled that company wanted some return favor from the city, unmindful of the donation of the Delaware street sidewalk. Council-man Wolcott said the company had stated that it would not lower the tracks without the city would lower the grade crossings at the city's expense, but since then a letter has been received by the board saying the tracks will be put at proper grade. The ordinance was passed giving the railroad company a portion of Leota street, Allen and Payne voting against it The ordinance introduced by Payne, making it an offense for any one to cry out fire at a public assemblage in a theater or hall, or to strike a match in any such place, and affixing a penalty for a violation, passed after an amendment had been made to cry "fire" in any hall or theater. The ordinance fixing the salary of sergeant-atarms of the Council at $100 a year passed City Attorney Curtis sent to the Council report on the resolutions passed at a former meeting, instructing him to investigate the price of gas, the pressure of which should be furnished, and decide if sumers are compelled to pay when they do not receive a sufficient amount of gas. Mr. Curtis quoted from the natural gas ordinance showing the prices set by dinance. The company should furnish a four-ounce pressure to the inch, and he said if consumers are not getting what they contracted for, they have the right to bring legal proceedings. Mr. Curtis does not advise the introduction of a special ordinance, as the original ordinance very clearly sets forth what is expected of the

City's Employ Now. The Board of Works yesterday appointed William Hughes clerk of the assessment bureau at a salary of $100 a month. It is true that Mr. Hughes has been waiting for the position for several weeks and that Mr. Taggart has been waiting also. Everybody has been waiting in the hope that the Council would increase the salary, but yesterday information was received that such was not to be expected. The situation was accepted by all with good grace, although rumor had it that Mr. Hughes had to be coaxed. He was the accepted applicant for the position, yet there came a surprise when he was appointed without the increase of Much to the disgust of some Democrats Mr. Taggart now has gathered around him those who worked for him while he was county auditor. The old courthouse crowd has been moved to the basement, Mr. Hughes being the last to join the fold. There is E. M. Johnson, in the controller's office, with two clerks who were in county offices. Bert Spencer is the Mayor's clerk and a few others are scattered around over the city department. John W. Piaff, who has been deposed to make room for Mr. Hughes, will be retained as chief clerk.

RECOGNIZES THE COMPANY. Board of Works Will Confer with the Citizens' Officials.

Although the Citizens' Street-railroad Company is not recognized by the city in suits pending as having a lawful existence, the Board of Works yesterday decided to hold a conference with the company concerning the improvement of bridges over Fall creek at Illinois street and Central avenue. The board has been informed that both these bridges are in the worst kind of repair and that they are dangerous. Upon information furnished the board, it would not be surprising if the b idges should fall at any time. The heavy trame of the street-car company has done more to damage the bridges than anything else. Neither of the bridges was constructed for such purposes as they have been used for. The company has double tracks on each bridge, and these tracks take up all of the floor of rives so much benefit from these bridges, the Board of Works is of the unanimous opinion that the company should place the bridges in a sound condition. City Attorney Curtis has been asked for an opinion concerning the company's liability and requested to consult the management of the com-pany and see if improvements cannot be CHARGED WITH SLEEPING.

Patrolmen Found in an East Washington-Street Barn. Charges preferred by Sergeant Hyland against patrolmen Patrick Curran and Joseph Beatty were filed yesterday with the Board of Safety. Sergeant Hyland says that early Saturday morning he discovered the two patrolmen sound asleep in a livery stable at the corner of Davidson and Washngton streets. It is not known how long they had slept when found, but they were seemingly comfortable. The men claim that they had been out in the cold until chilled through and through and when they entered the stable they became drowsy and fell asleep. Charges were also preferred against patrolman Walker, who is charged with actng in a manner unbecoming an officer while off duty. Captain Dawson and Sergeant Kruger found Walker with an exmember of the police, playing cards and talking rather loud in a ro m on Chesapeake street. The three policemen will be given a

BRUTALLY WHIPPED THE BOY.

Teamster John Millike Resented Being Hit by a Snowball.

About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon John Millike, of No. 540 West Washington street, with a blacksnake whip whipped a small boy in front of the Park Theater. He was arrested by Patrolman Pope and Superintendent Colbert, Millike drives a gravel wagon, and was going west on Washington street. Several boys were on the street in front of the theater, and one of them threw a snowball and hit Millike. The driver jumped from his wagon, caught one of the boys and began using his blacksnake whip on him. John Higgins, better known as "Commodore," was passing at the time and went to the boy's rescue. He, with some other bystanders, started to take Millike to a telephone to send for the patrol wagon when patrolman Pope and Superintendent Colbert happened to pass. Millike was turned over to them. He then began swear-ing and demanded the arrest of Higgins and the others who had interfered to save the boy, but Mr. Colbert informed Millike that he knew his business and would arrest the proper person. He continued swearing and abusing the officers, and the additional charge of profanity was placed against his name. The boy's name could not be learned. He received several hard blows from the whip before the bystanders realized what was being done, but was not seriously hurt. A number of people who saw the affair volunteered to appear in Police Court this morning and testify against Millike.

STUCCO WORKERS FALL.

caffold on Which They Were Working Gave Way.

Henry Sherman, Peter English and P. E. English, stucco workers, were decorating the celling of a room on the lower floor of the new Lemcke building, corner Market and Pennsylvania streets, yesterday, when the scaffolding on which they were at work gave way beneath them. Sherman is a very heavy man. He fell upon his feet, and, while his limbs were not broken, he was rather seriously injured by the shock It was feared he was injured internally by the jar. Peter English fell upon his head and shoulder. He was thought to have suffered a concussion of the brain. The other man received no injuries other than some slight bruises. Sherman is forty-five years of age and lives with his family at No. 717 South Meridian street. English is also a married man and has a family living at No. 601 Massachusetts avenue. The men are employes of Albert Gall. Mr. Gall had them conveyed to their homes, where they were given prompt medical attention. They are not considered dangerously hurt.

Several accidents have occurred on th Lemcke building. Some time ago a water boy fell from the seventh to the third story and received injuries from which he died a few hours later.

HALE NO MORE AN IDOL.

Schumacher Threw Him Twice in Less than Eight Minutes.

Peter Schumacher last night threw Herb Hale at English's Opera House twice in successive bouts. Both times the hammerlock hold was secured without apparent trouble by Schumacher and it was then only the matter of a few seconds until Hale's shoulders touched the floor. The first bout lasted four minutes and the second three and one-half minutes. The fact that the work was done so quickly was a source of great disappointment to the audience. It was expected that it would have been a much closer and more even contest. The re-sult also shattered the idol of many people here, who have thought Hale invincible within his class. After the match was over it was announced that Schumacher would accept the
